Carefully prepared livestock selection process

- We organize the client's visit to the country of origin for selection of livestock
- Our crew accompanies the client during the whole visit for selection, organizing every detail of this crucial process
- Depending on requirements of the client we offer two ways to organize this process:
- Selection from quarantine-export stables - usually it takes about 1-2 days, depending on the quantity of animals. For that, with our team of professionals, we pre-select and collect animals from farms of origin to our main location where the selection committee can examine every single animal.
- Selection from the farms of origin is essentially a similar process: the selection committee examines every single animal with respect to the required characteristics. However, it is a more time-consuming process because of the continuous travel to and from different farms.
- Either way, by the time of selection we provide the client with a full list of animals showing key characteristics in accordance with the agreed technical specification.

Quarantine facilities

- Using network of own quarantine and export stables we provide clients with flexibility in terms of livestock quantities
- All quarantine facilities and treatments of livestock remain under strict control of veterinary authorities of both export and import countries
- Veterinary treatment of livestock follows the strict health protocol agreed to by the countries of export and import
- Depending on the client's wishes, in addition to the treatment required by the official health protocol, we may provide further veterinary services including additional testing and vaccination.

Transportation

- Own transport companies and team of professional stockmen ensure highest level of reliability when delivering livestock directly to the farms of the clients.
